

The Edison Company of Boston reports its gross earnings for February this year to be 4.04 per cent. in excess of those for the same 1914 month.

Prices were higher in early trading today on the New York cotton exchange. In the Chicago pit May wheat opened from $\frac{1}{4}$ to $\frac{1}{8}$ lower. July was unchanged.

MRS. WHITE RAPS WOMEN SMOKERS

"Back Bay society is very much opposed to cigarette smoking among women," asserted Mrs. Elizabeth S. White, secretary of the Massachusetts Anti-Cigarette League, today. She does not believe Mrs. Anna T. Stebbins, Boston's woman censor, is right in claiming that many Back Bay women smoke cigarettes.

"In my opinion and from all the serious information at my command, I know the best people in the Back Bay are aroused over the evils of cigarette smoking on the part of women.

"It is universally condemned by the best women. There are a few young women who smoke, and learned the habit of doing so while abroad, but they have been condemned for it. I do not think you can find any endorsement of women smoking cigarettes.

MEN FROWN ON SMOKERS.
"The young men in society frown upon the woman who will venture into public with a cigarette.

"I wish that I could make every mother get information of what this filthy habit is doing for the growing young woman. No young man wants to court anyone who is given to this habit.

"Mothers are beginning to realize in many places what this habit is doing to the health of the race. We do more for the protection of the birds, in this state, than we do for the aliening of the young people who care anything about the young people and their future health, but would gladly see them cigarette fiends.

"The bright, clear eyes of womanhood or the rosy cheeks will not be colored by tobacco smoke. A few think that they have the right to do what they please and follow this habit because society women in Europe think nothing of using tobacco. But you are today a great change coming over the Back Bay.

WARY GIRLS IN SCHOOLS.
"Many a mother is determined that her daughter will not fall into this habit. Private schools are being warned. Young women are too sensible to lend themselves to a habit which will destroy their health and their looks.

"So I say we have nothing to fear from the women of sense in Boston. They are duly sensitive to the evils of cigarette smoking. Don't be convinced for one moment that the Back Bay is indifferent to this habit among the young people.

MANY RESCUES AT DORCHESTER FIRE

A fire in a three-story brick apartment block at Nos. 119 to 121 Norfolk street, Dorchester, early today, endangered the lives of about forty people, drove them to the street and did damage estimated by District Chief Murphy at $1,000 to the apartment numbered 121.

The cause of the fire is a mystery, as it started in an untenant apartment. The Dorchester police, under the direction of Captain Charles Heald, are rigidly investigating.

Patrolman Morris Zeeman discovered the fire. He forced his way into the hallway of No. 121 and on finding that section untenant set to work to wake the occupants of No. 120, which uses the same hallway.

One of the three apartments at this number was occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Israel Morris, their son Marcus, who is fifteen, and their five-year-old daughter, Mildred. Patrolman Zeeman woke them, and young Marcus Morris, though stupefied by smoke, helped his sister to the street.

Patrolman Zeeman next woke Mr. and Mrs. Nils Pearson and their children, Alice, Arthur and Esther, ten, seven and three years old. Next, on the lower floor in the rear of a store room, he woke Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Lidman. Mr. Lidman carried out his two-year-old son Morris and Mrs. Lidman guided their seven-year-old daughter, Ruth, to the street.

Among the twelve families driven out was that of Thomas Statman, who with his wife and six children lives on an upper floor of the long block. Mr. and Mrs. John Gilbert were also forced to flee to the street. The house is occupied on the lower floor, front, by store rooms through-out, but there is an apartment on each of the three floors at each number. Smoke filled the whole structure and drove all tenants to the street. None had time to dress save in the scantiest garments.

The building is owned by Samuel Rosenbaum of No. 137 Lena Park.

Curley Speaker at B. P. O. E. Irish Night

Irish Night was observed at the Elks' clubhouse on Somerset street, in the midst of a profuse display of American and Irish flags. The main hall was arranged like a cafe-chantant. Irish airs were the order of the occasion. Mayor Curley delivered an appropriate oration after 11 o'clock, and Daniel J. Kane followed him with a short address. The regular 11 o'clock sentiment to absent brothers was impressively offered by the exalted ruler, John J. Cassidy.

Answer the Alarm

"If your kidneys are inflamed, don't stand around and do nothing. Like a fire, it will soon get beyond control. You will get the alarm in time—backache, or dizziness or disorders of urination. Head the warning. Live simply, flush the kidneys by drinking plenty of pure water, and use Doan's Kidney Pills to help stamp out the cause of the trouble.

There is no other kidney remedy so widely used nor so well recommended.

Chasles Proof:
Mrs. Lavinia Rumson, 87 Addison St., Chelsea, says: "I suffered backache and lumbago. I suffered terribly and got no relief. I tried many different remedies, but nothing helped me up after I used a few boxes. I am as well as ever."

Painter Says He Has His Share of Limelight and Wishes No More Publicity.

ALLENHURST, N. J., March 17.—Neighbors of Ferdinand Pinney Earle declare that he is to be married shortly to his fourth and "most perfect" affinity, Miss Charlotte Herman, who is the mother of his eight-months-old daughter.

The painter refused either to affirm or deny the rumor. For the past two months, since he returned from Sweden, he has been living at the home of his brother, Victor, at Pace and Corlies avenues.

"I refuse to tell whether I am going to marry Miss Herman," Earle says. "You may say that I wish no more limelight. I guess I've had my share."

May Fight Yale for Ives Millions

NEW YORK, March 17.—Yale University expects to receive the bulk of Princeton General Bragdon Ives' estate of at least $1,000,000, provided his will is permitted to remain as he made it. Although there are bequests to his various members of his family they represent a relatively small portion of the estate, and negotiations are now in progress regarding claims of his relatives.

Rumors that there will be a contest of the will have been in circulation for several days, although an effort is being made to reach a settlement without the intervention of the courts.

Lexington Canoe Clubhouse Looted

A bold break at the Lexington clubhouse on the Concord River was discovered when the canoe of Howard S. O. Nichols of Lexington was found floating in the river about a mile below the clubhouse. All the lockers, nearly fifty in number, were broken into, and many of the canoes stored in the club were disarranged.

HORISTOP OF THE BRAVES

MACON, Ga., March 17.—Johnny Evans has a new play which he tried out on the Georgia Military College team. Johnny's arm is in a sling and he is apparently he does not like to make any hard, fast throws just now. In the contest a ball was pitched that was hailed the keystone king. The ball was hit close to second base and I ran over towards the bag. The ball was pitched in mid-season form and tossed it to me. Yours merrily then shot the ball over to him and I tried to throw it back to get a runner. We were to play as we would. The only difference was that I was not in any force-out at second base.

I mentioned this particular play chiefly in order to show you "fans" how careful ball players must be in the spring when his arm is not in the best of shape. It would be foolish for one to take unnecessary chances at this early stage of the game and take the race, being put out of commission by the greater part of the league season. My little example also proves that our infield is working in championship form once again. It feels like old times, here in this line hand setting the bases runner in a close play at first base. *

Joe Connolly, the Woonsocket boy, in certainly smashing the ball hard in Spring training. Joe was always a sweet hitter and even natter a ball game single-handed last year. He seems to be even better this year if a such a thing is possible and in bounding the ball off the fences in these parts with great regularity. His home run drive with three men on bases in the game in Milwaukee was a sweet blow and reminded me of the days last summer and early in the Fall when Joe was running in the lead in late in close games with a long, soaring home run. *

Bill James is setting plenty of base running practice these days. He has been a real terror in his chances on the basis for fear of being put out. But Joe and James is always put in to run for the Southons youth whenever he reaches first. "Big Bill" enjoys the sport and says that he will soon develop into a second Mabel.

THE CONDITIONS OF 1809 ARE REPEATED IN 1915

The British order in council forbids the United States to ship any goods of any kind—contraband by the recognized law of nations, or not contraband—to Germany, Austria or Turkey, or to buy any goods from either of those countries.

In addition, the United States is forbidden to ship manufactured goods or foodstuffs to Italy, Holland, Sweden, Norway, Denmark or any other neutral country when, in the opinion of British naval officers, these shipments might afterwards find their way from the neutral country to Germany or Austria.

We must go back over one hundred years to find a parallel to this extraordinary assumption that one power has dictatorial authority over the commerce of the high seas. In 1807 the British government, by orders in council, forbade the United States to ship any goods to any country in Europe, except Sweden, on the ground that goods shipped to any other country might be of use to France in her war with Great Britain.

The indignation aroused in this country was great. The first reply to the British orders was made in December, 1807, when Congress instructed President Jefferson to lay an embargo, forbidding foreign commerce of any kind.

The embargo remained in force throughout the year 1808, when it was succeeded by the non-intercourse law, by which American trade was permitted with all countries except Great Britain and France, each of these antagonists having assumed to forbid American commerce with the other.

The non-intercourse law enacted that trade should be resumed with either country which withdrew its orders against and ceased its aggressions upon American commerce. After another year of this isolation policy France had enough and withdrew her decrees, whereupon the United States resumed commerce with that country. The British government still maintained its aggressions, seizing American ships bound for France and for neutral countries. Whereupon the question of further submission to such degrading treatment or of armed resistance was submitted to the country in the presidential election of 1811-1812. Upon this issue Mr. Madison was elected by a great majority and war was declared.

In that war, for which the nation was absolutely unprepared, all the early fighting on land was advantageous to the British troops, veterans trained in the Napoleonic campaigns. One of the incidents which some Americans have not forgotten was the sudden seizure of Washington by a raiding force of British and the wanton burning of the unfortified and surrendered city by direct orders from London.

But while matters went badly on land, the little American navy covered itself with immortal glory on the sea and on the Great Lakes, winning sea battle after sea battle by superior gunnery and intelligence and seamanship. And finally, at New Orleans, Jackson avenged the defeats on land by routing, with great slaughter, a superior force of Wellington's invaders led by a commander of Wellington's own selection.

The results of the war may be best summed up in the words of a British historian, by no means favorably disposed toward anything American. He says:

"These United States really secured a good treaty of peace. It is true that it said not a word about impressment, search and neutral rights. Great Britain did not formally abandon her position on any of those, but everybody knew that circumstances had changed. This new naval power, whose frigates alone had shown their ability to fight English frigates on equal terms, was not likely to be troubled in future with questions of search; and, in fact, while not renouncing the right, Great Britain no longer attempted to enforce it. The navy, it must be confessed, was the force which had at last given the United States a recognized acceptance in the family of nations."

Such is the brief history of the causes and the results of the war upon which Americans, whose fathers risked their lives in waging it, look back with hearts big with pride.

And now again, after the lapse of more than one hundred years, this nation is face to face with the same pretensions, the same decrees and orders, the same insolent aggressions, the same intolerable seizure of its peaceful trading ships which roused our fathers to hot indignation and to war. Not one single condition is changed, except that Germany has taken the place of France as the antagonist of England.

And as the conditions are the same, so it is clear that the possible courses of action are the same which were open to our fathers.

We can submit to orders of foreign powers, permit our neutral commerce to be destroyed, our flag to be insulted and degraded to the office of disguising foreign ships and become contemptible in the eyes of the whole sneering world.

We can declare war upon any power that molests this commerce voyaging under the American flag.

We can lay an embargo and cease all trading with Europe until Europe's warring rulers have had their fill of fighting.

Or we can re-enact the non-intercourse law of 1809 and refuse to trade only with such countries as refuse to recognize the neutral rights of our commerce on the high seas.

One of these courses we must pursue. Because if we do not adopt either of the three active methods of reprisal and resistance, then we must accept the first and eat the dirt of submission. There is no escape from that logic.

Whatever course it is decided to pursue, we should all stand by our government. This is no time for the ordinary disputes of politics. It is a serious time, when Americans must walk warily, but shoulder to shoulder.

It is emphatically a time to drop unpatriotic and unbecoming and unneutral partisanship; a time to be neither pro-British nor pro-German, but solely pro-American.

No European nor Asiatic power loves us. The pretence that any of these powers is fighting for democracy or American ideals or the protection of "little peoples" or the sanctity of treaties or any other high moral issue, is sheer hypocrisy that ought not to deceive the intelligence of a child.

Russia is at war to gain her centuries-old object of seizing Constantinople and welding the Slav peoples into a world-dominating Slav empire.

Austria is at war to hinder Russia's aggrandizement and to blot out the Servian and Montenegrin nationalities.

France is at war to regain prestige and to recover Alsace-Lorraine.

Servia is at war because racial and religious antipathies and Russian money and intrigue controlled the assassin who made himself King of that turbulent country by double murder of his royal predecessors.

Japan is at war because she plots to seize China and exploit the riches and resources of that populous and helpless country in building up a great Asiatic world power.

Germany is at war because she wishes to remain the pre-dominating power in Europe.

And Great Britain is at war because German industry, patience and skill was rapidly taking the trade of the world from British financiers, manufacturers and ship owners, and events gave Great Britain a chance to destroy that trade competition by a war in which all other parties to the conflict were bound to suffer more loss than Great Britain, no matter which way victory went.

This war is just like every other European war—a slaughter of the peoples for the benefit and gain of autocratic and aristocratic classes. And these classes, no matter how sweetly they sing to us now, would direct their armies and navies against us without the least hesitation if they thought they could make gain by doing so.

We repeat, that it is time for the American people to drop sentimental sympathies with any of these autocracies and aristocracies and become heart and soul Americans, jealous only of the honor of our flag, of the rights of our own countrymen, of the freedom of the world seas and, finally, of the dignity and majesty of our own, dear, native country.
